Assimilation Or Replacement - a Study about Neanderthals and Modern Humans Christian Schäfer,2009-08 Essay from the year 2005 in the subject Biology Evolution grade A very good Umea University Department of Ecology and Environmental Sciences course Evolutionary Ecology 14 entries in the bibliography language English abstract The Neanderthals lived in Europe and the Near East for at least 250 000 years and they outdared several climate changes They were capable of surviving in a harsh cold environment and were well adapted to it cultural and morphological Thus the Neanderthals have been proven to be a successful human kind But why then did they disappear so quickly and without a trace just between 40 000 and 28 000 yr BP years before present 8 One possible answer is that modern humans starting to invade the Near East and Europe out of Africa 45 000 to 40 000 yr BP have outcompeted them due to higher cultural and mental abilities using the resources in a more efficient way than the Neanderthals But is this really true Have modern humans really had higher abilities Did they admix with the local Neanderthal populations integrating the native genes in their gene pool Or did modern humans not interbreed with them And the big question were Neanderthals and anatomically modern humans distinct species or just local variants of the same species To bring more light into this scenario these questions will be answered in the following chapters using genetic morphological and simulation data that has been brought up by several researchers over the last years Answering these fundamental questions also lies in the range of basic needs of human mind we all want to know where we come from who was our ancestor and who was it not To realize which strange ways evolution sometimes takes and to determine what really happened is for sure an exciting thing and that is exactly what researchers do when they trace human evolution back to the point when Neanderthals and modern humans met in Europe during the last ice age Only one of them should

The Self-Assembling Brain Peter Robin Hiesinger,2021-05-04 What neurobiology and artificial intelligence tell us about how the brain builds itself How does a neural network become a brain While neurobiologists investigate how nature accomplishes this feat computer scientists interested in artificial intelligence strive to achieve this through technology The Self Assembling Brain tells the stories of both fields exploring the historical and modern approaches taken by the scientists pursuing answers to the quandary What information is necessary to make an intelligent neural network As Peter Robin Hiesinger argues the information problem underlies both fields motivating the questions driving forward the frontiers of research How does genetic information unfold during the years long process of human brain development and is there a quicker path to creating human level artificial intelligence Is the biological brain just messy hardware which scientists can improve upon by running learning algorithms on computers Can AI bypass the evolutionary programming of grown networks Through a series of fictional discussions between researchers across disciplines complemented by in depth seminars Hiesinger explores these tightly linked questions highlighting the challenges facing scientists their different disciplinary perspectives and approaches as well as the common ground shared by those interested in the development of biological brains and AI systems In the end Hiesinger contends that the information content of biological and artificial neural networks must unfold in an algorithmic process requiring time and energy There is no genome and no blueprint that depicts the final product The self assembling brain knows no shortcuts Written for readers interested in advances in neuroscience and artificial intelligence The Self Assembling Brain looks at how neural networks grow smarter
