

HTC Desire S Owners Guide

Since buying my first Android phone (the excellent HTC Desire) back in April 2010 I have been on a mission to turn as many of my friends towards these fantastic phones as possible. Although I am not a developer and couldn't write a line of code to save my life, I am still considered the

"Geek" of the group and people have listened. In that time I have been dishing out help and advice to all my friends when they followed my advice and went Android. It got to the stage where I was just forwarding previously sent e-mails and referring people to XDA thread links after searching my "Sent Items" folder for the relevant advice. So I decided to save time sifting through my sent items each time someone bought a phone on my say-so, and I created this. I have compiled all the e-mails into this noob-friendly guide specifically for people new to HTC and Android. Please bear in mind this is not a guide aimed at long-time Android users, developers, or custom ROM flashers, as you will have figured all of this out by now anyway. It has evolved and grown over many months so may repeat itself in certain areas, and I have now tweaked it for the Desire S.

DO NOT INSTALL OR USE TASK KILLERS!!!!!!

Android does not work like Microsoft's Windows or Nokia's Symbian. Apps that are not running in the foreground are not using any processing power, and should Android need the RAM, it will automatically close any background apps not being used to free up the memory it needs to work. This will all happen automatically and you'll not even notice it. Android 2.3 (aka Gingerbread) comes with its own way of force-closing any rogue apps should you need to. 3rd party Task Killers stick their nose into all this, have to run in the foreground all the time, and as a result slow the phone up, drain the battery, and always cause more problems than they solve. Don't worry if your free RAM is reported as being low. Free RAM is wasted RAM. One exception to this is when you have what's called a Memory Leak. It simply means that RAM is not being freed up properly when an app is closed. It happens over time when your phone has been on for a couple of weeks without a restart. I recommend restarting the phone if it starts to get sluggish. A vast majority of the time this solves any lag issues.

Make sure an app has plenty of prior downloads and read the reviews before installing it, and always do so via the Google marketplace (unless I send it you). That way you are protected by Google from dodgy apps. Google even have the ability to hit a "panic button" and remotely uninstall suspect apps from everyone's phones should a dodgy one make it past the checks and onto the marketplace. Apps from
