Geospatial Techniques in Urban Hazard and Disaster Analysis Pamela S. Showalter, Yongmei Lu, 2009-11-11 This book is the second in a series that examines how geographic information technologies (GIT) are being implemented to improve our understanding of a variety of hazard and disaster situations. The main types of technologies covered under the umbrella of GIT as used in this volume are geographic information systems, remote sensing (not including ground penetrating or underwater systems) and global positioning systems. Our focus is on urban areas broadly defined in order to encompass rapidly growing and densely populated areas that may not be considered urban in the conventional sense. The material presented here is also unabashedly applied; our goal is to provide GIT tools to those seeking more efficient ways to respond to, recover from, mitigate, prevent and/or model hazard and disaster events in urban settings. Therefore, this book was created not only with our colleagues in the academic world in mind but also for hazards professionals and practitioners. We also believe graduate students will find the material presented here of interest, as may upper division undergraduate students.

Facing Hazards and Disasters National Research Council, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Committee on Disaster Research in the Social Sciences: Future Challenges and Opportunities, 2006-08-10 Social science research conducted since the late 1970s has contributed greatly to society's ability to mitigate and adapt to natural technological and willful disasters. However, as evidenced by Hurricane Katrina, the Indian Ocean tsunami, the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks on the United States, and other recent events, hazards and disaster research and its application could be improved greatly. In particular, more studies should be pursued that compare how the characteristics of different types of events, including predictability, forewarning, magnitude, and duration of impact, affect societal vulnerability and response. This book includes more than thirty recommendations for the hazards and disaster community.
