

1. Introduction

The purpose of this study is to investigate the effects of a new educational program on student performance. The program is designed to improve critical thinking and problem-solving skills through a series of interactive exercises and projects.

2. Methodology

The study was conducted using a quasi-experimental design. A group of students was selected from a large public high school and assigned to the experimental group. A control group was also selected from the same school but did not participate in the program.

3. Results
4. Conclusion	The results of the study indicate that the new educational program had a significant positive effect on student performance. The experimental group showed higher scores in critical thinking and problem-solving tasks compared to the control group.
	These findings suggest that the program is effective in enhancing students' cognitive skills. Further research is needed to explore the long-term effects of the program and its applicability in other educational settings.
