Tropical Forest Seed Lars H. Schmidt, 2007-04-20 The role and perception of forests in tropical areas has changed drastically during the last half century Natural forests as resources for forest products are dwindling Sustainable management of natural forests faces many difficulties in practice although progress has been made However rural people in tropical countries often experience that the forests which were previously the buffer for agriculture and an important resource are becoming more and more inaccessible Remaining forests are to a large extent protected degraded or so far away from settlement that in practice they are beyond reach The majority of the world's forest products in the future will come from managed plantations and cultivated trees The term plantation usually referring to traditional block plantings of industrial species is acquiring a wider meaning which includes for example smaller woodlots shelterbelts and various types of agroforestry Forest seeds are in this context of utmost importance Not only are seeds the most commonly used propagation material they are also the carriers of the genetic material from one generation to the next Forest seed handling is thus an integrated part of selection management development and conservation of forest genetic resources in a larger context With this in mind and considering how self evident the matter of seed quality is in agriculture one can wonder how little attention has been and is given to forest germplasm in many afforestation and plantation programmes

Guidelines for the Management of Tropical Forests: The production of wood Ian Armitage, 1998-01-01

Sustainable management of logged tropical forests in the Caribbean to ensure long-term productivity Gräfe, S., Köhl, M., Eckelmann, C.M., Bremner, Q., Oatham, M., Pacheco, R., Playfair, M., Shono, K., 2021-09-01 To facilitate sustainable management of logged forests in the Caribbean forest authorities of Belize Guyana Suriname and Trinidad and Tobago jointly with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the University of Hamburg as a scientific partner implemented the regional project Ensuring Long Term Productivity of Lowland Tropical Forests in the Caribbean financed by the German Federal Ministry of Food and Agriculture The main objective of the project was to support the sustainable management of logged forests to maintain productivity and prevent further degradation For this purpose extensive field studies were conducted in the project countries which resulted in silvicultural recommendations presented in this publication The project findings revealed that the application of general sustainable forest management protocols for tropical production forests that set limits on harvesting does not necessarily ensure sustained productivity if the composition and management of the residual stand are not considered The ratio of the number of harvested trees to the remaining future crop trees can provide a simple indicator of the sustainability of harvest If the current harvest exceeds the number of future crop trees the harvest is not sustainable As a rule of thumb at least one preferably two future crop trees per harvested tree should be retained for future use Protection of future crop trees can be a simple and practical approach to prevent high grading and degradation of the forest growing stock The importance of reduced impact logging to reduce unnecessary damage to the future crop trees and for sustainable forest management in general is stressed

The Sustainable Forestry Handbook Neil Judd,Sophie Higman,Stephen Bass,James Mayers,Ruth Nussbaum,2013-06-17 The Sustainable Forestry Handbook is widely considered to be the essential aid to understanding and implementing sustainable forest management Providing a clear and concise guide to the practicalities of implementing international standards for sustainable forest management this fully updated second edition covers new Forest Stewardship Council requirements High Conservation Value Forests clearer requirements on pesticides and developments in policy and forest governance Aimed at forest managers and employing extensive cross referencing and easy to understand illustrations this highly practical handbook explains in clear terms what the standards require forest managers to do and how they might go about implementing them Sustainable Forest Management in a Changing World: a European Perspective Peter Spathelf,2009-12-04 Yet another book on the topic of Sustainable Forest Management can only be justified by new information that is of direct relevance The contents of this volume concentrate on the very latest factors and developments thus hopefully contributing both to the book s attractiveness and to closing gaps in the discipline s database This book is written for researchers in the field of forest management international forestry and climate change related issues legal and policy advisors as well as for managers of private companies who deal with SFM The authors of the various sections are scientists in the field of forestry and other environmental sciences They represent different institutions mainly universities and research agencies in Germany but also high level international institutions in development co operation such as the World Bank FAO and IIASA The scope of the book is to refresh the meanings and perceptions of SFM against the background of the rapid changes in our natural and social environment Climate change and the rapid increase of atmospheric CO concentration is a global process with negative impacts of different kinds among others on natural ecosystems such as forests A crucial issue therefore is how forest management can contribute to forest conservation in light of changing climatic conditions Moreover policy changes such as the introduction of certification schemes and the new emphasis laid on Non Wood Forest Products justify the re evaluation of the role of SFM in delivering ecological goods and services from our forests

Reversing Deforestation Brent Sohngen, Douglas Southgate, 2024-12-10 Dire reports of surging deforestation in the Brazilian Amazon appear often in international headlines with commentators decrying the destruction of tree covered habitats as an act of environmental vandalism Although forest losses are alarming broader trends are bending in the direction of forest recovery In this book Brent Sohngen and Douglas Southgate address the long term recovery of forests in Latin America The authors synthesize trends in demography agricultural development and technological change and argue that slower population growth and increasing crop and tree yields in conjunction with protecting local ownership of natural resources have encouraged forest transition This book explores how market forces ownership arrangements and the enforcement of property rights have influenced this shift from net deforestation to net afforestation Forest transitions have happened before such as the recovery of tree covered habitats in Europe and the United States Signs of a similar transformation in land use are now present in Latin America Ending deforestation requires a strengthening of forest dwellers property rights while ensuring that biodiversity conservation is no longer treated as a value less externality The resulting forest landscape actively managed for ecosystem services will be more resilient as is needed to overcome climate change
