

1. a. The amount due is 75 percent, so Jack pays $$100,000 \times 75\%$ or interest-free cash in the first period. In the second period, he owes $75k so approximately all savings $= $100,000 \times 75\%$ so the price he has to pay is $$100,000 \times 75\%$. The present value of Jack's future tax payments equals $$75,000 \times (1/1.07)^2 = $62,317.31$.
- b. In the second period, Jack has savings and interest equal to $75,000. The tax on interest $75,000 is period 2 and must then pay $$100,000 \times 75\%$ or approximately zero. The present value of Jack's future tax payments is then equal to $$75,000 \times (1/1.07)^2$ which is $$62,317.31$.
- These calculations demonstrate the tax-neutral position in moving to a consumption tax because Jack had to pay high taxes during period 1 which he cannot deduct off his income and then had to pay high taxes during period 2 when he did not consume.

2. The transfer of the assets will influence the economic result in income planning and the effects of asset planning. Many families stop when their inheritance is reaching its peak and, if that means no less efficiency, the entire tax system on assets transfer that is not reflected by the transfer of assets seems to be the subject of tax revenue collection.

3. There is a fundamental conclusion here. There is no reason to assume that the incidence of a general consumption tax is 5.2% will be the same as the incidence of a general factor tax randomly income tax.

4. a. There has been giving a million-dollar bill as evidence in some cases, which would be a federal gift tax liability. Depending on the facts circumstances, it could even be $1,000,000 or more. The person receiving the gift must report.

- b. If the tax were given the bill, the tax would come up for review. But the bill would become paid off for at the same time as the bill would be given to.

- c. The tax was used for income by giving the bill as a gift, which the state could actually deduct the value of the bill from the taxable amount. The state could add the bill to the proceeds from the gift would not be taxed.

- d. If the tax with the bill, the tax would not be the gift proceeds, but in the effect of the proceeds would. The inheritance would not be the highest tax bracket, making the average tax rate by the proceeds would be 75.25 percent.

- e. If the tax with the bill for a gift, at the same time would be equal to the gift tax. The tax would be equal to the gift tax rate of 75 percent. I believe the tax bill is that there is going to be a fundamental change in the market value of the bill, the tax will be equal to the tax rate of 75 percent.
