

La población indígena en Costa Rica según el censo 2000

Elizabeth Solano Salazar¹

Resumen

El Instituto Nacional de Estadística y Censos llevó a cabo, como parte del IX Censo Nacional de Población del 2000, dos censos para obtener información estadística sobre la población indígena del país: realizó una encuesta sobre etnia y aplicó dentro de las 22 comunidades indígenas establecidas una encuesta censal específica, lo cual hace posible un análisis étnico geográficamente a las indígenas dentro o fuera de las territorios, con resultados comparados en situaciones con la de los demás habitantes del país y entre los habitantes en los mismos territorios indígenas.

La pertenencia de la población a un grupo indígena se determinó con base en el autoconocimiento o autoidentificación de cada persona o con etnia, de acuerdo con la respuesta por la misma persona o por un informante.

Los resultados muestran importantes variaciones en etnia entre las poblaciones y territorios indígenas, así como entre quienes se reconocen como indígenas y quienes no lo hacen, diferencias que se traducen en situaciones de riesgo o menor vulnerabilidad social de las poblaciones.
