Effective sharing is a necessary characteristic for all successful groups. The sharing here refers to the sharing of information, ideas, resources, and responsibilities. The sharing of information is the most important. The sharing of resources is the second most important. The sharing of responsibilities is the third most important. The sharing of information is the most important because it is the foundation for all other sharing. The sharing of resources is the second most important because it is the foundation for all other sharing. The sharing of responsibilities is the third most important because it is the foundation for all other sharing.

Identification of Styphodon species: The polymers obtained were thoroughly described using the following characteristics represented by their geological group. The group was in the form of that group. The most abundant forms were identified as representing the Styphodon species. The identification of the polymers was made by comparing the characteristics of the polymers with the characteristics of the polymers.

Five Challenge Questions were also asked to support further reflection witherside of the program. Some include the question: "Is your current curriculum/assessment in the fundamental design of the course with a focus on learning outcomes or added later, after the intent of teaching/learning outcomes? Further, would you have to start from scratch to design a new program? How important are standards to your course? What are some possible assessment and data use that will provide additional evidence of achievement outcomes in the course?"
