Keeping Mum Caring For Someone With Dementia:

Keeping Mum Marianne Talbot, 2011-04-04 At 3am I was startled awake by the opening of the stairgate Leaping out of bed I found Mum clothes on over her pyjamas grumbling she was fed up of being moved from pillar to post and was going home When her mum was diagnosed with Alzheimer s disease Marianne Talbot decided she couldn t put her into a care home Instead for five years she looked after her mum in her own home For nearly three of those years she chronicled for the readers of Saga Magazine Online the fears and frustrations the love and the laughter and the tears and the traumas of caring Now in this heart warming book you too can meet Marianne Mum and the appalling Fatcat You will also find plenty of practical tips for caring for someone with dementia and on staying sane whilst doing so a resources and useful contacts section and Marianne s reflections on caring from a distance and on when caring comes to an end Written for anyone anywhere who has anything to do with dementia or with caring in reading it you will know you are not alone The Carer's

The Epistemic Innocence of Irrational Beliefs Lisa Bortolotti, 2020-06-11 In an ideal world our beliefs would satisfy norms of truth and rationality as well as foster the acquisition retention and use of other relevant information In reality we have limited cognitive capacities and are subject to motivational biases on an everyday basis We may also experience impairments in perception memory learning and reasoning in the course of our lives Such limitations and impairments give rise to distorted memory beliefs confabulated explanations and beliefs that are elaborated delusional motivated delusional or optimistically biased In this book Lisa Bortolotti argues that some irrational beliefs qualify as epistemically innocent where in some contexts the adoption maintenance or reporting of the beliefs delivers significant epistemic benefits that could not be easily attained otherwise Epistemic innocence does not imply that the epistemic benefits of the irrational belief outweigh its epistemic costs yet it clarifies the relationship between the epistemic and psychological effects of irrational beliefs on agency It is misleading to assume that epistemic rationality and psychological adaptiveness always go hand in hand but also that there is a straight forward trade off between them Rather epistemic irrationality can lead to psychological adaptiveness which in turn can support the attainment of epistemic goals Recognising the circumstances in which irrational beliefs enhance or restore epistemic performance informs our mutual interactions and enables us to take measures to reduce their irrationality without undermining the conditions for epistemic success

ReValuing Care in Theory, Law and Policy Rosie Harding, Ruth Fletcher, Chris Beasley, 2016-11-10 Care is central to life and yet is all too often undervalued taken for granted and hidden from view This collection of fourteen substantive and highly innovative essays along with its insightful introduction seeks to explore the different dimensions of care that shape social legal and political contexts It addresses these dimensions in four key ways First the contributions expand contemporary theoretical understandings of the value of care by reflecting upon established conceptual approaches such as the ethics of care and developing new ways of using and understanding this concept Second the chapters draw on a wide range of methods from doctrinal scholarship through ethnographic empirical and biographical research methodologies Third the book enlarges the usual subjects of care research by expanding its analysis beyond the more typical focus on familial interconnection to include professional care contexts care by strangers and care for and about animals Finally the collection draws on contributions from academics working in Europe and Australia across law anthropology gender studies politics psychology and sociology By highlighting the points of connection and tension between these diverse international and disciplinary perspectives this book outlines a new and nuanced approach to care exploring contemporary understandings of care across law the social sciences and humanities
