Transportation is a major challenge for any company, and the fact that it is a major expense for many companies is a testament to the importance of the problem. The transportation problem is a classic problem in operations research, and it has been studied for many years. The problem is to find the most efficient way to transport goods from a source to a destination. The problem is often solved using linear programming, which is a mathematical technique for finding the optimal solution to a problem. The transportation problem is a special case of the linear programming problem, and it can be solved using the same techniques. The transportation problem is a very important problem in operations research, and it has many applications in the real world. For example, it can be used to optimize the distribution of goods from a warehouse to a network of stores. It can also be used to optimize the routing of vehicles in a delivery network.
