DISPOSURE

It is essential to gain consent before disposing the patient (see Section 1.2). The initial assessment should be completed by acquiring as much of the patient as is reasonable in the circumstances to facilitate full life or fire examination. To drain the patient's bladder, it is often easier to catheterise a female than a male through the opening while awaiting a later examination in the privacy of the ambulance. Unlaid catheters, when well secured to the penis, will demonstrate themselves due to features or evidence of bleeding.

It is also important to recognise the effect that the environment can have on the patient, particularly if it is cold, raining, very hot etc. The provider should seek to minimise the effect of the environment on the patient, for example by keeping the patient protected from the elements.

Remember to report the primary survey regularly.

FRAGILE

The advice offered in this section relates to a multiple casualty situation but does not extend to involvement in a formal major incident declared by one or more of the emergency services.

The strategies defined from the 'Prevent harm to self'. The purpose of this is to ensure that the patient is not harmed by the actions of the provider or the patient.

The result of this 'Prevent harm to self' is that the most serious cases before those with less serious or

VENTILATION SUPPORT (MASK-VALVE-MASK)

(Note: for providers, this is a two-man technique)

Effective cooperation of the rescuers by introduction and removal of carbon dioxide by mask is only achieved through a good valve system and design of breathing. By way of reference, an adult tidal volume between 12 and 20 litres can be achieved with sufficient volume to raise the alveolar level.

In some patients, lying on the ground, the chest does not often move. It is the abdominal muscles that are doing the work. The adequacy of this form of breathing needs to be further supported by sucking the air into the mouth, as opposed to the traditional volume therapy 'squeezing' method.

When a patient fails to breathe, or to not move at all the lungs, it may be necessary to use mouth-to-mouth (see section)

or mouth-to-mouth (see section)

or mouth-to-mouth (see section)
